On 2-28-47 he was assigned to the New Orleans Office.

During an inspection of the New Orleans Office in March, 1947 Inspector Gurnea said that he presented an average appearance and had a fair personality. He was not too impressed with him during the interview and attributed this to the fact that he was very upset over making such a poor examination grade. It was believed that he would probably develop, however, he would never be outstanding.

By letter dated 4-17-47 he was censured for attaining a grade of 70% on an examination given by the Inspector which was below the minimum acceptable rating of 85%. He subsequently made a passing grade of 91%.

On 5-3-47 SAC Weeks rated him FAIR and said that he presented a fair appearance but his approach was perhaps over-ingratiating and he needed to develop additional poise and confidence in his manner. It was believed that he would require more than average development to make satisfactory contacts in law enforcement and business fields. He was less readily available for assignment to any type of territory than the average but it was believed that with additional development he could be considered available for such assignments.

On 7-14-47 SAC Weeks rated him GOOD and said that his approach was improving considerably and he had overcome much of the deficiencies by his evident sincerity and earnestness. He was gathering poise and confidence and was still applying well above average effort. He was likewise showing some improvement in making his contacts. He was developing above average in report writing and the organization of his work and it was felt that on the whole he had exhibited considerable improvement and that he had the capacity for development into a capable Special Agent.

On 9-20-47 SAC Weeks rated him VERY GOOD and said that he had developed and his personality had emerged considerably since his assignment to the field, with the acquisition of confidence in his approach. He had applied himself well above average and had demonstrated well above average aptitude in investigative work. It was believed that he would develop into an above average agent in due time.

On 10-15-47 he was transferred to the Knoxville Office.

INTERVALS						P WAVES
PR	.12	QRS	.06	QT	.32	Normal

RS-T SEGMENT						T WAVES
PRECORDIAL LEADS (Specify)

SUMMARY, SERIAL CHANGES, AND IMPLICATIONS:

Conclusion: The QRS-T angle is normal in the frontal projection but the T vector is directed far anteriorly. Suggesting early left ventricular ischemia. These changes could be due to the rapid rate alone however, therefore the tracing should be repeated.
